OCTOBER LUNCH MEETING

SPEAKER: Michael Sanderson, ITE Western District President, and Principal/Managing Director of Sanderson Stewart

TOPIC: Sustainability in Transportation – Recently, sustainability and green building have become a major focus of the design and construction industries. The U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC) has focused on the implementation of many aspects of sustainability through LEED programs. Although these programs have traditionally been limited to individual buildings, the newest rating system addresses the neighborhood design and transportation aspects of sustainability. This rating system integrates principles of smart growth and urbanism, and includes criteria related to walkable streets, connectivity, transit facilities, and transportation demand management.

Mr. Sanderson will present a summary of green transportation initiatives and provide details on some of the transportation-related components of LEED for Neighborhood Development.
